Memorial Parks – a safer option for Scattering Ashes

Scattering the ashes of a loved one has become very popular in Australia. However, choosing the right location is important as a lasting memory in the future.

Very often, people choose to scatter their ashes in a location that was special to their loved one. However, over time, such places may change or even be built upon, therefore changing the location and with it the memory.

We can help preserve the memory

Creating a memorial in a special place helps to keep the memory alive beyond the funeral service. Memorials provide families and friends with a tangible source of comfort in the form of an everlasting place of remembrance. We have a number of beautifully maintained and peaceful memorial parks, where ashes can be placed without fear of the location changing.

Genealogy

There is a growing interest and increase in genealogy these days with many people seeking to understand their family history. A memorial park is one of the first places people contact as part of this process.
